

THE '26
SUMMER FESTIVAL

TYPE ANATOMY STUDY GUIDE

Enjoy time away with exciting rides, games,
music, and water-side activities!!

APEX

The peak where two strokes meet to create an angle of less than 90 degrees.

COUNTER (CLOSED)

The complete enclosed area of a rounded letter.

ARM

A stroke extending horizontally and diagonally from a vertical stem.

COUNTER (OPEN)

The partially enclosed area of rounded letters (such as “u” and “n”).

ASCENDER LINE

The invisible line that marks the top of letters extending over capital letters.

CROSSBAR

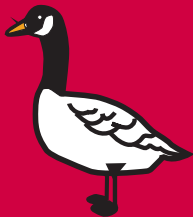

A horizontal stroke connecting vertical strokes on either side (such as “H” or “A”).

BEAK

The small projection off of an adjoining stroke, or creates a terminal at an arch’s end.

CROSS STROKE

A horizontal stroke that crosses a single stem (such as “t” or “f”).

BOWL

The lower part of rounded letters such as lowercase “a” or uppercase “B.”

CROTCH

The space where two strokes meet, or where an arch meets a stem.

BRACKET

The part of the serif that connects the stem and another stroke (creates a curve or wedge).

DESCENDER

The vertical stem that dips below the baseline.

EAR

The small projection on the top-right side of the lower case “g” (in its binocular form).

LOOP

A counter, often closed, below the baseline that connects to an upper counter via a link.

STROKE

The straight or curved components of a glyph that are diagonal.

EYE

The closed counter of a lowercase “e.”

SERIF

Decorative strokes that appear on stems, arms, ascenders, and descenders in a serif typeface.

SWASH

An ornamental extension added to a standard stroke, used for flourish.

LEG

The (usually) diagonal downward stroke on the letters “k” and “R.”

SHOULDER

A curved stroke extending outward and downward from the top of a stem.

TAIL

A decorative descending stroke.

LIGATURE

Two or more letters joined together to form a single glyph.

SPINE

The curved stroke that forms the main portion of an uppercase or lowercase “S”.

TERMINAL

A small curve that can be found at the end of a stem or stroke.

LINK

The stroke that connects the upper and lower bowls of a lowercase “G”.

SPUR

A sharp projection that extends from a stroke or stem.

TITLE/DOT

The dot above the lowercase “i” and “j”.

LOBE

The upper and lower bowls of an uppercase “B”.

STEM

The main vertical stroke or strokes of a glyph.

VERTEX

The point where two strokes meet at the bottom of a glyph.

